

Your chance for training

Want to join an intense and productive training week to improve your reporting on science for development?

- content-gathering
- news and feature writing
- photography
- digital audio editing

Be part of a dynamic team producing print, radio and online reporting on a major international conference (www.banana2008.com).

What others have to say

"During the week we have had the opportunity to meet scientists and to discuss the information, which helped to correct misunderstandings and avoid misreporting." Salome Alweny, print journalist Uganda (trained in Arusha, March 2008)

"This week has helped build relationships and friendships between the research community and the media. The participants have also learned we are an effective channel for them to convey their messages to farmers and the wider public." Lazarus Laiser, radio journalist, Arusha, Tanzania. (trained in Arusha, March 2008)

Want to apply?

The next WRENmedia training workshop will be held alongside the Banana and plantain in Africa conference in Mombasa, Kenya, October 2008.

Fill in the application form online at www.agfax.net/training or email us at training2008@wrenmedia.co.uk.

Ten fully-funded places for radio and print journalists available

Deadline for applications is 31st July, 2008